

Ivan Sirotkin

All-in-all a very well done IA, and a lot of commitment to it. In terms of sophistication, there was not a whole lot beyond regular data base features and normal arithmetic calculations, but the overall complexity of it was more than sufficient to practice all of his programming skills, and the program functioned well. So though not a whole lot of bells and whistles, but he did what he set out to do, and satisfied his clients (reasonable) requirements.

(All Students:

- Netbeans auto-generated code usually pasted below other code for GUI classes.
- Interviews not counted in Word Count
- Table contents (re-)counted (by me) if close to sentences)